

A SPRINGTIME CLOWNING ADVENTURE

WITH ANGIE FOSTER

Are you curious about clowning and haven't taken the plunge? Clowning creates a playground to explore our humanity. The workshop can be a chance to liberate ourselves from the 'shoulds' and 'should nots' which can constrain our capacity to be authentic and playful.

"Man only plays

when he is in the fullest sense of the word a human being,

and he is only fully a human being

when he plays."

– Friedrich Schiller

Angie Foster is a clowning facilitator on the team of Nose to Nose of North America. She has been leading workshops in the Philadelphia area and elsewhere in the U.S. She is also a professional actress and has performed on Broadway, off-Broadway and in regional theaters. She has been teaching and directing plays at Kimberton Waldorf School for 17 years. Her training includes the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Andre Gregory, Spacial Dynamics, Gestalt therapy training, and 30+ years of yoga. This form of clowning combines her passion for play and improvisation and her quest for what it is to be human.
